Please refer to your response to GCA/USPS-T42-1(b)(i), in which you refer to certain facilities at which pieces rejected by the AFCS are manually faced and cancelled and directed to a MLOCR/DIOSS for automated processing.

(a) Please provide the volume of single-piece First-Class Letters that are manually faced and cancelled and directed to a MLOCR/DIOSS, as described in your response.

(b) Does the Postal Service intend either to maintain or to expand its use of this method of processing First-Class Letters rejected by the AFCS?

GCA/USPS-T42-5

Please describe the markings, applied by the Postal Service, which would be found on a stamped single-piece First-Class Letter at the time it is received by the addressee –

(a) When the piece has been successfully processed on the AFCS;

(b) When the piece has not been successfully processed on the AFCS and has been directed to a manual unit for processing; and

(c) When the piece has not been successfully processed on the AFCS and has been directed to a MLOCR/DIOSS for processing.

GCA/USPS-T42-6

Please describe the differences (if any), which would be discernible by visual inspection, between a cancellation applied manually to a stamped single-piece First-Class Letter and a cancellation applied to such a piece by the AFCS.
